Happiest Of New Years

It is a foregone conclusion that 1965 will bring its own assortment of setbacks to human happiness.

There will be enough strife and violence to justify utter despair on the part of all who deplore the imperfections of this imperfect world. The Cassandras will have plenty to wail about in 1965.

Whether one looks at home or abroad for evidence of human contrariness, perversity, malice and hatred will be plainly visible. It will look as if the world had gone from bad to worse to those who want to think that way.

Government at all levels will leave much to be desired. The virtuous will seem to be less numerous, and evil-doers will seem to be multiplying.

There will be no time in 1965 when any of us will be able to look upon the world and find everything to our liking. That is not the way the world is.

WHY, THEN, do we wish one another Happy New Year?

What are we really wishing?

Is it not for our friends to possess the wisdom, grace and humor to be happy in spite of all the setbacks that will be given to their happiness?

Happiness is not a general condition. It is personal, not collective. It is a state of mind, not a state of existence.

We are hopeful that those who know this can be happy in their own thoughts. That is why we wish our friends a Happy New Year. This is what we wish for them and for ourselves-happiness in our thoughts

WE WISH for a state of mind that can withstand the shock of war, bestiality, violence, hatred, malice, slander, disaster, barbarism, strife, misunderstanding and misrepresentation.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, is 70 today. When appointed acting director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in 1924 by President Coolidge, Hoover was 29. He had been in the Justice Department sev-

He now has served as FBI director under seven presidents and 13 attorneys

He is the nation's top law-enforcement official - in a sense at least, the world's top "cop."

Hoover's 40 years as a G-man almost certainly will set a record for public

On the occasion of Hoover's 40th year in office last May, House Speaker John W. McCormack (D. Mass.) asserted that "love of God animates his every action, and love of country."

Obviously nettled at criticism that probably hit close to home, Hoover last month made some uncharitable remarks about the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., other civil rights leaders, and the Warren Commission. Critics hinted that mandatory retirement might be "wise." But Hoover, who at 70 will still take a drink or buy a $2 ticket on a horse, is turning down a $30,000 a year tax-free pension to stay on the beat. "I just don't like the rocking chair life," he says. "If I retired I wouldn't enjoy life very much."

Thousands who have felt the same way when mandatory retirement closed in on them envy this unusual man who can decide single-handed to stay on the job.

Extra Dividend For Realism

The second-biggest payoff under a policy of international realism for the United States would be improvement in relations with the Soviet Union. No sooner had it become evident that U.S. opinion was turning sour on continued aid for Egypt than word was leaked from the Kremlin that Egypt should not expect the Soviet Union to take up the slack.

This might seem like a reversal of Russian policy. But it is actually a continuation of Russian policy.

The Russians are as sick of "foreign aid" as Americans are.

Moscow is as anxious to put an end to handouts for ingrates and double-dealers as the sane minds in Washington.

If Washington now is going to veer strongly toward sanity in foreign policy and away from Lady Bountiful, Moscow would be overjoyed.

It, too, could tell ingrates that Lady Bountiful is sick of it all.

Charming Man-Bad Spot

Giuseppe Saragat, new president of Italy, is a charming man by all accounts -a scholar, a patron of the arts and a seasoned political figure noted for his ability to say No. Among the things he has said No to most emphatically is doctrinaire communism. He, himself, is a doctrinaire socialist, which in some American versions is the same thing. But the new president of Italy, who lives closer to these things, knows there is a difference.

His election after a tedious political ordeal in Italy's National Assembly of 963 senators, deputies and regional representatives was made possible, nevertheless, by the support of at least 100 of the assembly's 250 Communist party mem-

I am tired of the idea that people who formerly voted for Republican presidential candidates but could not see their way clear to vote Republican in 1964 deserted the party.

It sounds to me as if those who talk this way had borrowed party-line ideas from outside the United States.

The only line anyone is duty-bound to cling to here is the policy of the nation. Twice in my lifetime I have thought national policy was 100 per cent wrong but both times I have continued to pay taxes, stand up for the national anthem

The support of the Communists was made possible because the largest of the non-Communist parties, the Christian Democrats, could not make up its collective mind to support him en masse.

Its members were so interested in internal squabbling they handed the Communists a chance to put a non-Communist candidate for president into office with their support.

It is uncertain whether President Saragat should be congratulated or sympathized with under the circumstances.

He is a victim of the splinter-party system of European politics-the same system that finally convinced France it had to get the splinters out of its system by adopting a new constitution and electing Charles de Gaulle president of what amounted to a constitutional dictatorship.

Their integrity put them in conflict wth another part of their party.

This happened a generation ago when two factions of the Democratic party became irreconcilable. There was a head-on collision between states' rights Democrats and New Deal Democrats.

Luckily for the Democrats, that was the year Franklin Roosevelt won the presidency by default from Herbert Hoover, who had been hamstrung by the depression. States' rightists decided they'd rather be president than right. Besides, they had a monopoly on seniority in both houses of Congress. So they hung together.

Republicans aren't that lucky. They're not in power. If they're not careful, they will hang the party now needs so much. So the American party's presidium has launched a counteroffensive. It's a long time since its chiefs such as Gus Hall and Henry Winston have danced. Furthermore, the Frug and the Monkey are not exactly Mos-

This problem was turned over to the Communist who now is being groomed for national party leadership. His name is Mortimer D. Rubin when he travels abroad as the Communists' new, national organizer. At home he is Danny Rubin, who came to New York from Philadelphia after the last Communist party convention in 1959.

He and the others in the Presidium have been meeting around the countryside and now appear to have developed an approach which they believe will bring young people back into the party, whose ranks consist mostly of those who were young when they joined back in the '30s.

THIS PROGRAM which will eschew what Lenin entitled "infantile leftism" will be submitted to the Communists' largest is no doubt that policy has been made and it will be tough.

It will be aimed at winning over the "working class youth" -in a move similar to that of the party's early beginnings.

This means, for example, infiltration of the unions. It is generally overlooked that the rank and file members now are younger and have never known the days of powerful Communist influence inside labor when the party controlled at least 11 major unions.

The potential is vast. There are millions of younger people now in the nation's plants who are restless because the seniority lists give the old-timers the best job, the best pay, the best shifts. And all the party needs is just a few thousand recruits. They will be hit with a Communist anti-war appeal. Scores of rallies are planned as demonstrations against American action in Asia and Africa. The old anti-war slogans of the '30s soon will ring through the land. And there will be parallel drives in the low income sections of many large cities. In the slums the appeal will be for joint action against landlords. There will be block by block recruiting. And what slum street does not have griev-

RENT STRIKES will be unleashed. Defense committees will be set up - defense against arrests of demonstrators, defense against arrests of law violators, defense against legitimate action which must be taken daily by the police of any large community.

Efforts will be made to infiltrate the new anti-poverty organization set up by the govfollowed by attempts to use a coalition of all the committees for local political action. Finally there will be a move for unity of all "left forces."

To the younger generations, inexperienced in the ways of united front tactics and front organizations, it will all seem to be a ground swell of mass conscience. To those who lived through the '30s it will mean simply the revival of old Stalinist tactics and efforts to exploit the yearnings of the less fortunate

-Samuel Butler, 1600-1680. The first resolution by man to do better probably was made by Adam after he was thrown out of the Garden of Eden - and turned over a new leaf. Since then the popular time for resolution making has been New Year's Day, especially if one has imbibed freely at the flowing bowl the night before. But like many great and mighty resolutions, great actions are not always true sons and the will weakens in inverse ratio to the disappearance of the hangover.

However, whether or not one makes resolutions, there is one question uppermost in the minds of all: "What will the new year

WHAT WILL it bring the world, the United States, our communities, our families and ourselves?

The bigger question though should be how will we use the time at our disposal in 1965. There will be 8,760 hours to squander or use fruitfully. Arnold Bennett in his book, "How To live on 24 Hours a Day." says of the "democracy" of time: "No one receives either more or less than you receive. We have, and we have always had, all the time there is. You can only waste the passing moment. You cannot waste the next year or tomorrow, they are kept for you."

Another writer expressed his views with this whimsical thought; "It seems to me that people used to have more spare time before so many time-saving inventions were invented. I think perhaps I shall try to work a sort of time bank in

Rightist Scare

Among the advantages of a long life and a sharp memory is the capacity to judge present trends of opinion against the background of the past.

A current scare is recorded in the mass of "literature" in the forms of books and magazine articles about right-wing groups and individuals and their propaganda. The tremendous majority for the safe and comforting man in the White House has not stilled the fear in so many places that the republic and the sanctity of our life are in dire peril.

I venture to suggest that the ease with which writers of these frightening warnings about rightist groups get their material in print is due to the simple fact that dissent is always more interesting than conformity. One criminal gets more space in print than a thousand reputable deacons. And we are living in a time when conformity means agreement that federal bureaus and bureaucrats are all necessary to our salvation.

THIS CARRIES me back to the period immediately after the armistice in 1918 and into the early 1920s. First there was the great Red scare projected by Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer in the dying days of the Wilson administration. Palmer's crusade paralleled the refusal of the Wilson administration to recognize the de facto government of Russia.

Then there came the election of Warren G. Harding and a return to what he called the "normalcy" which had prevailed before Theodore Roosevelt and others had threatened the Republican regimes of those years and had ended up in the great schism of 1912.

The Cabinet assembled by Harding was designed to suggest years of safe and sane government ahead.

The dissent in those days was not in the Democratic party, or in what was left of it after Harding's election. It was in small groups of varying degrees of radicalism.

Young college instructors felt brave when they required The New Republic to be read by their students and in their classes they ventured to mutter complaints about the trustees and such conservative college administrators as Nicholas Murray Butler. Small maga-zines and other forms of propaganda sprang up.

tions. But the creative conservatives are still in the wings. I'm not arguing here for either of these American movements of dissent. I'm merely indicating that both are common manifestations of a restless nonconformity which always is latent in American life. I'm pointing out that dissent is not the peril that some would have us believe. The republic survived the earlier movements, and because of a great economic crash they gained ascendency. That ascendency has since become the orthodoxy we recognize today. WHAT I'M ARGUING for now, as I did in those earlier days in a small way, is a bit of tolerance for those who legitimately provide the criticism

J. Edgar Hoover At 70

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, is 70 today. When appointed acting director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in 1924 by President Coolidge, Hoover was 29. He had been in the Justice Department sev-

He now has served as FBI director under seven presidents and 13 attorneys

He is the nation's top law-enforcement official - in a sense at least, the world's top "cop."

Hoover's 40 years as a G-man almost certainly will set a record for public

On the occasion of Hoover's 40th year in office last May, House Speaker John W. McCormack (D. Mass.) asserted that "love of God animates his every action, and love of country.'

Obviously nettled at criticism that probably hit close to home, Hoover last month made some uncharitable remarks about the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., other civil rights leaders, and the Warren Commission. Critics hinted that mandatory retirement might be "wise." But Hoover. who at 70 will still take a drink or buy a $2 ticket on a horse, is turning down $30,000 a year tax-free pension to stay on the beat. "I just don't like the rocking chair life," he says. "If I retired I wouldn't enjoy life very much.'

Thousands who have felt the same way when mandatory retirement closed in on them envy this unusual man who can decide single-handed to stay on the job.

Extra Dividend For Realism

The second-biggest payoff under a policy of international realism for the United States would be improvement in relations with the Soviet Union

No sooner had it become evident that U.S. opinion was turning sour on continued aid for Egypt than word was leaked from the Kremlin that Egypt should not expect the Soviet Union to take up the slack.

This might seem like a reversal of Russian policy. But it is actually a continuation of Russian policy

Charming Man-Bad Spot

Giuseppe Saragat, new president of Italy, is a charming man by all accounts -a scholar, a patron of the arts and a seasoned political figure noted for his ability to say No.

Among the things he has said No to most emphatically is doctrinaire communism. He, himself, is a doctrinaire socialist, which in some American versions is the same thing. But the new president of Italy, who lives closer to these things, knows there is a difference.

His election after a tedious political ordeal in Italy's National Assembly of 963 senators, deputies and regional representatives was made possible, nevertheless, by the support of at least 100 of the assembly's 250 Communist party mem-

Dear Nephew: You and I haven't sunk our teeth into politics since the GOP brought Gen. Eisenhower home from Europe to steal the presidential nomination from Robert A. Taft.

But there is something I want to say, and you are the only one I can say it to without risking a punch in the nose.

I am tired of the idea that people who formerly voted for Republican presidential candidates but could not see their way clear to vote Republican in 1964 deserted the party.

It sounds to me as if those who talk this way had borrowed party-line ideas from outside the United States.

The only line anyone is duty-bound to cling to here is the policy of the nation. Twice in my lifetime I have thought national policy was 100 per cent wrong but both times I have continued to pay taxes, stand up for the national anthem and keep my mouth shut.

Only in a totalitarian society is a compulsory party line laid down by a political organization - and only because of the one-party system in such countries.

Everywhere else, a citizen is free to go and come in politics.

No one owns him.

No one can throw him out. No one can cut off his prerogatives if he chooses to think for himself, unless he is part of the patronage system.

The support of the Communists was made possible because the largest of the non-Communist parties, the Christian Democrats, could not make up its collective mind to support him en masse. Its members were so interested in internal squabbling they handed the Communists a chance to put a non-Communist candidate for president into office with their support.

It is uncertain whether President Saragat should be congratulated or sympathized with under the circumstances.

He is a victim of the splinter-party system of European politics-the same system that finally convinced France it had to get the splinters out of its system by adopting a new constitution and electing Charles de Gaulle president of what amounted to a constitutional dictatorship.

Your aunt and I know lifelong Republicans who felt their political party abandoned them this year.

They did not desert the party. It deserted them.

Their integrity put them in conflict wth another part of their party.

This happened a generation ago when two factions of the Democratic party became irreconcilable. There was a head-on collision between states' rights Democrats and New Deal Democrats.

Luckily for the Democrats, that was the year Franklin Roosevelt won the presidency by default from Herbert Hoover, who had been hamstrung by the depression. States' rightists decided they'd rather be president than right. Besides, they had a monopoly on seniority in both houses of Congress. So they hung together.

Republicans aren't that lucky. They're not in power. If they're not careful, they will hang separately.

I am tired of hearing my fellow Republow Republicans referred to as 'deserters." There is no such thing as "desertion" in partisan politics in America. It's freedom of choice.

Among the quotes was an excerpt from a column I had written some time ago. What apparently pleased the young revolutionists was the following: .. the left splinter groups believe in hitting the streets, stirring up picket lines on the sociological and industrial fronts and mass action. The leader of one such group (Progressive Labor vice-chairman Bill Epton) has been arrested on charges of criminal anar-

THE SAME GROUP which considers publicity over a criminal anarchy charge a strong sales point, also publishes a weekly newspaper sold in combination with tickets to regular dances. The dances are well attended. Obviously the call to violent action is not repulsive and the recruiting is spirited. The organization has sufficient funds to operate several headquarters in Manhattan, fully equipped with phones, desks and an enthusiastic youth movement ready to hit the streets. This is of concern to the authorities. But even more concerned is the small executive group which runs the American Communist party. The competition is keen, especially where it hurts - among the youth which the party now needs so much. So the American party's presidium has launched a counteroffensive. It's a long time since its chiefs such as Gus Hall and Henry Winston have danced. Furthermore, the Frug and the Monkey are not exactly Moscow's style.

ANYONE FAMILIAR with dialectics knows that there must

outlet for all this energy. But how does the Communist party U.S.A. develop such an appeal among the thousands of much needed youth who now find romance only in the revolutionary tactics of Fidel Castro and

This problem was turned over to the Communist who now is being groomed for national party leadership. His name is Mortimer D. Rubin when he travels abroad as the Communists' new, national organizer. At home he is Danny Rubin, who came to New York from Philadelphia after the last Communist party convention in 1959. He and the others in the Presidium have been meeting around the countryside and now appear to have developed an approach which they believe will bring young people back into the party, whose ranks consist mostly of those who were young when they joined back in the '30s.

THIS PROGRAM which will eschew what Lenin entitled "infantile leftism" will be submitted to the Communists' largest national committee. But there is no doubt that policy has been made and it will be tough. It will be aimed at winning over the "working class youth" -in a move similar to that of the party's early beginnings. This means, for example, infiltration of the unions. It is generally overlooked that the rank and file members now are younger and have never known the days of powerful Communist influence inside labor when the party controlled at least 11 major unions

The potential is vast. There are millions of younger people now in the nation's plants who are restless because the seniority lists give the old-timers the best job, the best pay, the best shifts. And all the party needs is just a few thousand recruits.

They will be hit with a Communist anti-war appeal. Scores of rallies are planned as demonstrations against American action in Asia and Africa. The old anti-war slogans of the '30s soon will ring through the land.

And there will be parallel drives in the low income sections of many large cities. In the slums the appeal will be for joint action against landlords. There will be block by block recruiting. And what slum street does not have griev-

RENT STRIKES will be unleashed. Defense committees will be set up - defense against arrests of demonstrators, defense against arrests of law violators, defense against legitimate action which must be taken daily by the police of any large community

Efforts will be made to infilganization set up by the government - efforts which will be followed by attempts to use a coalition of all the committees for local political action. Finally there will be a move for unity of all "left forces."

To the younger generations, inexperienced in the ways of united front tactics and front organizations, it will all seem to be a ground swell of mass conscience.

To those who lived through the '30s it will mean simply the revival of old Stalinist tactics and efforts to exploit the yearnings of the less fortunate among us.

Great Resolutions

By John N. Adams

Let's Make Good Use Of Time On Our Hands

Great actions are not always true sons of great and mighty resolutions.

-Samuel Butler, 1600-1680. The first resolution by man to do better probably was made by Adam after he was thrown out of the Garden of Eden and turned over a new leaf.

Since then the popular time for resolution making has been New Year's Day, especially if one has imbibed freely at the flowing bowl the night before. But like many great and mighty resolutions, great actions are not always true sons and the will weakens in inverse ratio to the disappearance of the hangover.

However, whether or not one makes resolutions, there is one question uppermost in the minds of all: "What will the new year bring?"

WHAT WILL it bring the world, the United States, our communities, our families and ourselves?

The bigger question though should be how will we use the time at our disposal in 1965. There will be 8,760 hours to squander or use fruitfully.

Arnold Bennett in his book, "How To live on 24 Hours a Day," says of the "democracy" of time: "No one receives either more or less than you receive. We have, and we have always had, all the time there is. You can only waste the passing moment. You cannot waste the next year or tomorrow, they are kept for you."

Another writer expressed his views with this whimsical thought; "It seems to me that people used to have more spare time before so many time-saying inventions were invented. I think perhaps I shall try to work a sort of time bank in which we can deposit saved time and draw it out all at once, like a vacation fund." RECENTLY in a letter to Ann Landers, a visitor from a foreign land gave his impressions of America. He wrote that he was overwhelmed by the spaciousness of our country, awed by its beauty, that he loved every inch of it but found something wrong with

"In America," he said, "there is much pleasure but no joy. Americans seem always to surround themselves with so much noise. They even walk with radios in their hands.'

We hurry a great deal. We are afraid of the quiet - afraid to think. Our conversation is too often the mouthing of things we have heard on radio or TV.

WE DON'T fully appreciate our lofty mountains, great prairies, our parks and woodlands, our climate. It truly is the most beautiful country in the world. Our prosperity does not satisfy our inner hunger. Sometimes we feel we cannot even live with ourselves.

What better resolution could we make for the new year than to open our eyes to the beauties and our minds advantages of our nation? Now would be a good time to resolve to spend our extra time in positive instead of negative thoughts about our land, our neighbors, our leaders and ourselves. To view with pride instead the best resolution we could make for 1965. These things would be great actions that would be true sons of great and mighty resolu-

Rightist Scare

By Raymond Moley Among the advantages of a long life and a sharp memory is the capacity to judge present trends of opinion against the background of the past.

A current scare is recorded in the mass of "literature" in the forms of books and magazine articles about right-wing groups and individuals and their propaganda. The tremendous majority for the safe and comforting man in the White House has not stilled the fear in so many places that the republic and the sanctity of our life are in dire peril.

I venture to suggest that the ease with which writers of these frightening warnings about rightist groups get their material in print is due to the simple fact that dissent is always more interesting than conformity. One criminal gets more space in print than a thousand reputable deacons. And we are living in a time when conformity means agreement that federal bureaus and bureaucrats are all necessary to our salvation.

THIS CARRIES me back to the period immediately after the armistice in 1918 and into the early 1920s. First there was the great Red scare projected by Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer in the dying days of the Wilson administration. Palmer's crusade paralleled the refusal of the Wilson administration to recognize the de facto government of Russia. Then there came the election of Warren G. Harding and a return to what he called the "normalcy" which had prevailed before Theodore Roosevelt and others had threatened the Republican regimes of those years and had ended up in the great schism of 1912.

The Cabinet assembled by Harding was designed to suggest years of safe and sane government ahead.

The dissent in those days was not in the Democratic party, or what was left of it after Harding's election. It was in small groups of varying degrees of radicalism.

Young college instructors felt brave when they required The New Republic to be read by their students and in their classes they ventured to mutter complaints about the trustees and such conservative college administrators as Nicholas Murray Butler. Small magazines and other forms of propaganda sprang up.

SOME OF THIS dissent was so extreme as to be silly, just as is some of the so-called right - wing propaganda now. But some was sound and wholesome criticism of government policies which were in effect for the greater part of a

I might add that within that period there appeared a genuine literary flowering which was the greatest in this century. The old muckrakers were supplanted by serious writers and critics of the prevailing conformity, such as Sinclair Lewis, Henry Mencken, Theodore Dreiser and F. Scott Fitz-

Perhaps, I repeat perhaps, the so - called conservative movement will yet awaken us to the folly of believing that salvation, including the abolition of poverty and the cure of cancer, heart disease, and paralysis can come from larger congressional appropriations. But the creative conservatives are still in the wings. I'm not arguing here for either of these American move ments of dissent. I'm merely indicating that both are common manifestations of a restless nonconformity which always is latent in American life. I'm pointing out that dissent is not the peril that some would have us believe. The republic survived the earlier movements, and because of a great economic crash they gained ascendency. That ascendency has since become the orthodoxy we recognize today. WHAT I'M ARGUING for now, as I did in those earlier days in a small way, is a bit of tolerance for those who legitimately provide the criticism of which they believe the party system is incapable. I grant that some of the organizations that have been springing up over the last few years, and indeed since the November election, are misguided and a few are mischievous.

I didn't like the radical groups back there in the 1920s any more than I like the Birchites now. Both have done an ill service to the ideology they professed to support. But we must always recognize that extremes beget extremes. As the wheel of opinion has turned, the orthodoxy of the 1920s has become the nonconformity of the 1960s, and the dissenters of those earlier days have become the established order of today. Resistance to a public trend is always wholesome. For from the clash of views there comes a measurable stability. The last time Scotland Yard moved was in 1890, when lack of space forced London's policemen to leave their original headquarters at No. 4 Whitehall Place, adjoining Scotland Yard. East Liverpool Review

When you know that tomorrow is going to be busy from early morning right up until dinner time, it's amazing what you can do with some advance planning, imagination and convenience products.

A molded salad prepared with one of the new salad gelatins - celery or mixed vegetable flavor - gives a focal point to the menu.

A perfect way to finish the last of a baked ham is to combine it with some crisp celery cooked peas, and salad gelatin. A hearty macaroni casserole can be put together the night before and placed in the refrigerator to be baked the next day. Now the mainstay of the menu is made.

While the table is being set and the macaroni is baking, complete the menu with the crisp radishes and olives, crusty bread and hot soup - out of a can, of course.

Ham, Pea and Celery Salad 2 packages (3 oz. each) celery or mixed vegetable flavor salad gelatin ½ teaspoon salt

BRITTLE FINGERNAILS AND GELATIN

Q. Is it true that the taking of gelatin bene-

A. Claims have been made that daily doses of gelatin will overcome nail brittleness but as one Philadelphia specialist said, "This is hard to believe." One rather elaborate study showed that nail hardness, determined from nail clippings, was substantially increased after one month of gelatin "treatment." Since it takes three months for nails to grow, the nail clippings which supposedly showed increased hardness were from portions of nails produced two months prior to the administration of gelatin! It's safe to say that those who advocate this remedy have not proved its effectiveness beyond reasonable doubt.

PATERNITY

Q. Is it scientifically possible to identify the father of a child beyond any doubt whatso-ever?

A. No. However, paternity tests can, in many cases, exclude the man as the father of the child. The fact that the tests fail to exclude the man is not necessarily accepted as evidence that he is the father of the child in question.

QUESTION: What is meant by airplanes breaking the sound barrier?

A SPECIAL PLANE FOR A SPECIAL JOB

* * ANSWER: Sound travels on air waves, which, at sea level, move at around 760 miles an hour. When an airplane flies at speeds below this (upper left), there is pressure in the air ahead of the wing, and such pressure waves move in front of the plane and act to make the air ahead flow so as to receive the plane easily when it enters it. These "message" waves travel ahead at the speed of sound. But suppose that the plane itself flies at the speed of sound or faster? In this case, there are no message waves to prepare the air; the plane crashes into the unprepared air causing violent disturbances called shock waves (upper right). These may travel down to earth as strong, suddent sounds which are sometimes so violent as to break windows. After breakthe sound barrier, a plane may seem to be flying silently, for it is actually flying ahead of the sound of its own engines. To fly at this supersonic speed, specially-designed planes are needed, as ordinary ones might be torn to pieces. Such special planes are strongly reinforced and have pointed
